

Practical ideas facilitate work in St. Walburg's Hospital, Nyangao, Tanzania

By Sr. Dr. Fausta Liundi

Geographical location of St. Walburg's Hospital, Nyangao, Tanzania

Missionary Benedictine Sisters from Tutzing Germany who established and run St. Walburgs Hospital at Nyangao, Tanzania

Preparation of nylon sutures from fishing line 4

Preparation of nylon sutures from fishing line 5

Bed for Perkins traction exercises

Hangers for IV fluids in Operation Room

Preparation of colostomy bag

Preparation of colostomy bag

Preparation of colostomy bag

Preparation of colostomy bag

Preparation of colostomy bag

Colostomy bag in use

Histology samples sent abroad in ordinary envelope and results received by internet

Wooden stand for bottles collecting urine

Trolley with boxes containing new aluminium clipboards for patient's files

Humecca Sober Dermatome developed for LRS countries

Irrigation of contaminated wound

Our simple rules improving wounds healing (DIVE)

- Meticulous debridement of the wounds containing necrotic tissue (Debridement)
- Use of running water from the tap under strong pressure by hose for cleaning mechanically contaminated wounds (Irrigation)
- Keeping wounds as much as possible open for unrestricted access of air (oxygen) (Ventilation)
- Elevation of heavily injured limbs in order to decrease oedema (Elevation)

Surgical Team of St. Walburg's Hospital

